Stocks Part XXVIII Debt The Unacceptable Burden

A couple of years after I was out of college, I got my first credit card. They were tougher to come by in those days. Not like now when my unemployed pet poodle has his own line of credit. The first month I racked up about $300 or so. When the bill came, there was each charge listed by vendor, with

Renegade Inc For Those Who Think Differently

The cause of vastly inflated executive remuneration is the same as that which lies behind every other bubble. On July 11 The Times published an article by Theresa May in which she highlighted the anomaly of the FTSE trading at the same level as it was 18 years ago, while in the same period executive pay has more than trebled, with a growing gap between what these companies pay their
