True and False eserver mamet

True and False reveals Mamet's belief that "the actor is, primarily, a philosopher," as the audience comes to the theater to "hear the truth and celebrate it with each other" (102). On one level, the title of this treatise comes from Mamet's distinction between the spontaneous "truth of the moment," which "is another name for what is actually happening between the two people onstage" (20), and the manipulation and falsehood of self-promotion, which often passes for acting.
