It really depends on what a customer means by "quality grass finished beef". Some people want flavorful, but lean and tender beef. Others, myself included, want flavorful, tender and well marbled grass finished beef. People that claim to raise well marbled beef consistently in less than 2 years on grass alone are not being honest.

Simply stated, grass fed beef tends to be lean meat and requires a longer cooking time sometimes. We've gone through cycles of drought/plenty of rain/somewhere in between so how many acres per cow varies. I don't raise cattle but hope to do so some day at some point. We have to contend with bitter cold weather and tornado weather, etc.
