Toxic Charity How Churches and Charities Hurt Those They

In the book Toxic Charity: How Churches and Charities Hurt Those They Help, Robert D. Lupton details how he feels that many aspects of modern forms of charity do more harm than good. It is his opinion that mission trips, food pantries, weekend service projects, and many other forms of charitable giving and volunteerism are ineffective, do not take into consideration the emotional well being of those being served, and in general do not accomplish the goals that they set out to achieve.

Charity creates dependency. Thus, charity disempowers its recipients, and does not lead to lasting improvement. "Distribution" of charity "emasculates," disempowering fathers especially and, ultimately creates resentment among the recipients. Empowerment, and development, need to replace charity. Let the "recipients" be the leaders, deciding what needs to be done.
