Root beer Wikipedia

History. Sassafras root beverages were made by indigenous peoples of the Americas for culinary and medicinal reasons before the arrival of Europeans in North America, and European culinary techniques have been applied to making traditional sassafras-based beverages similar to root beer since the 16th century. Root beer was sold in confectionery stores since the 1840s, and written recipes for

Homemade Root Beer Soda Pop Stephen Cresswell

Pretty much the only book of its kind, that is it gives recipes (some over 100 odd years old) for real Root Beer using sassafras roots. My only gripe is that the recipes use a dangerous method of fermentation and carbonation all in the one run (which is a recipe for exploding bottles).
